Whitted Is Dangerous Player In Left Field; Duffy Lewis a Problem

Boston's Outfielder Has Rare Ability in Throwing, Cutting Off Drives That Go Foul, and Retrieving Ball Generally.

By HUGH S. FULLETON.

With the comparative figures of Whitted and Lewis, left fielders of the rival teams, we reach the finish of the study of the regular teams, and with rather surprising results.

The fact that Philadelphia's outfield shows so well when studied in comparison with the famous Red Sox trio is astonishing, and shows that Moran's team has a lot of strength for which it has not been given credit. While the Red Sox outfigure the Phillies by a rather heavy margin both in the infield and the outfield, it is not enough to offset what advantage may be gained through comparison of pitchers alone.

The Phillies are not outclassed. We find that their pitchers will have to pitch about 7 per cent better ball than the Red Sox to equalize the difference in hitting power, and that the fielders will have to do about 8 per cent better than they do regularly to bring them to the Boston standard, unless the Red Sox fall off that much in their work.

The figures show neither team is likely to hit as hard as it does in season, because the opposition pitchers "dope out" to cut down its batting and reduce the attacking strength all round.

But to the final comparison of the regulars. There is a big surprise in these figures. You would not suspect that Whitted, cast off by the Boston Braves, ranks so closely up to Duffy Lewis this fall that there is small choice between them? Neither did I until I studied the dope carefully and analyzed each man's work.

When you come to figure an individual ball player, you must make allowance for his disposition, if that tends either to enhance the value of his work or to detract from it.

WHITTED AN ODD BALL PLAYER.

Whitted is an odd ball player. He has disposition. Last year he was one of the most valuable of the Braves. He was the happy disposition, the fellow who turned serious situations into a joke, who laughed off rows between players, smoothed over difficulties, stood between some of the athletes and Stallings, often taking the scoldings of the manager upon himself, and shielded some more sensitive person. Stallings used him when he wanted to vent his ire upon the team, and Whitted grinned and passed it off with a jest.

On the Phillies' team he has been invaluable in keeping up the team spirit during discouraging times. He has cheered the players along, furnished the "joke" and the "pull" that the team needed, and made Moran's way easier by his tact in straightening out those little internal clashes that so often injure a ball club.

Whitted is a dangerous man on the attack, resourceful, quick to switch his plan, and he can play a game of cat and mouse with the opposition. He is old grapefruit to the tune of about 280, gets on a lot of times, and is one of the top-notchers in run scoring for his team.

His fielding is not brilliant, but it has been satisfactory, and with a steady job assured, he has really done better work this year than he did last. On the bases he is not a speedy man, but he is tricky, trying to outguess pitchers, and he steals a fair number of times, principally by catching the other team unprepared. He is just a little above the average in mechanics for an outfielder, and he works hard and fights all the time. It is his spirit and punch that make him compare so well with his rival.

Duffy Lewis is one of the problems of the series. We have come to be so accustomed to referring to Boston's wonderful outfield that at times we take it for granted that it is flawless. Care can do nothing to figure things that way. He sits down there on the bench and sees a lot of things that are forgotten by the fans. There was a time in the season when it seemed as if Lewis would be benched and that Hendrickson would get a steady job in left field. It was rumored through the American League that the change was certain, but it did not take place, as Lewis backed considerably in his work, especially in his hitting.

Lewis is not the greatest outfielder. He is scarcely above the average as a mechanical fielder, but he has strong points against his weak. His ability to throw, and to cut off hard drives that go into the outfield, and to retrieve the ball before it gets into that embarrassing corner is one of his strong points which will come in handy even on the new Braves' ground. He has a rather short field near the foul line, and he can get to almost anything inside the barrier. He has nerve and courage in going against fences and stands for fly balls. He is inclined to make his worst breaks at the most important moments of games, possibly through over-anxiety to make the play. Every ball player calls this luck, but I have a suspicion that there is a psychological reason for muffs and fumbles at important times.

One thing is certain—you never can say Whitted isn't trying, and that charge was brought against Lewis late in the season because he seemed to lack his old confidence and looked discouraged. I know that a lot of ball players who hold iron-clad contracts did not try hard this year because of protecting themselves. I have seen outfielders deliberately stop batted balls, let them fall to the ground, and then toss them back to the infield instead of trying to scoop them cleanly and make a play. I heard Lewis accused of this, but his own teammates in-

ROOKIES ARE GIVEN CHANCE THIS WEEK

Manager Griffith to Keep But Few Regulars in Game for Three Days.

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER.
Manager Clark Griffith is going to stick to his rookies in the three games to be played this week with the league tallenders, the Philadelphia Athletics. Barring Foster, Zeb Milan, Shanks, Gandil, and the backstops, only youngsters will be found in the daily line-up. The Kansas City Athletics will probably give the Griffiths a big boost in his home in Coffeyville. Al Smith will probably leave for Texas in a few days. McEride will remain to be the trainer's care for his sprained ankle, but he will not again be seen in the line-up.

Tom Sawyer and Tommy Connolly will alternate at shortstop against the Mack-men. Sawyer's good work last week has given him a big boost in the estimation of the Old Fox. The Des Moines kid was not expected to show much hitting strength, but he suddenly came to life and delivered the real goods. So he will receive further trials before the curtain falls.

Joe Judge will probably be kept at first base against Connie's aggregation. Eph Milan going to right field. Judge has clinched a trial in 1915. If he can start off as he is finishing this season, he may be found at first base when the next campaign opens.

Kid Jamieson's all around work has made a distinctly favorable impression upon Manager Griffith, and the young Bison is certain to be seen in the outfield next year. He is the best thrower on the ball club right now, and needs only big league experience to become a star.

Eph Milan has improved greatly ever since joining the Griffiths this year, and it is more than likely that he will be found at the training camp in the spring. He is almost as flashy a fielder as his brother, and if he can show hitting ability, he may be retained.

Turner Barber is another youngster sure of being at the training camp in 1916. This boy can hit, field, and throw. He requires tutoring on the paths of the ball, but that will be given to him next spring.

The entire proceeds of Wednesday's game between the Athletics and the Griffiths will be given to the National Defense League, which holds a convention here from October 4 to October 7.

These coming three games with the Mack-men here will close the season for the Griffiths.

Moran After Collegian.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 4.—Pat Moran, of the Phillies, is after Otis C. Lawry, captain and star infielder of the University of Maine baseball team for next spring. He asks Lawry to report at spring with the Phillies, but, unable to report then, Lawry will see Moran when the world series is on.

Phillies Are Biggest Dark Horses Ever to Enter World Series

Braves of Last Year Comparatively Unknown Before Games, But There Was World of Dope Then as Compared With Pat Moran's Misfits.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Pat Moran's Philadelphia Nationals probably will go into the coming world's tilt the biggest "dark-horses" that ever faced a starting gun in the October derby. The Braves of last year were comparatively unknown before the series, but there was a world of dope on them, however reliable, as compared with the Quakers this hectic year.

The Braves went into the game as fighters, with the glory that goes to a team that fights its way to the top. The Phillies haven't had such a trip to Fenwayville. They loomed along on an even, fifty-fifty keel, never having to fight very hard, and letting their rivals cut each other's throats. Aside from a very definite opinion of what Alexander is, no one knows a whole lot about the Phils.

About the only comparison can be made is the fact that the Phils will compare the Phils with the 1912 Giants, who faced the Red Sox in that memorable eight-game series. And Moran's men do not compare with the new crew that McGraw led against Stahl then. The Giants batted about fifty points more than the Phils, and had three pitchers ranking as stars.

The old Giant machine then was at its highest point of efficiency—Marquard and Tarsa were budding on the edge of stardom and Mathewson was in his prime. Yet the Red Sox of 1912, who were admittedly weaker than the Red Sox of 1915, won the series.

With the exception of the great Alexander, Moran's tribe is just as big a crowd of baseball "misfits" as were the Braves. It is a club thrown together from the cast-offs of other teams and thrown together not with any harmonious idea, but with an eye to saving the dollar in the face of what looked to be a bad season.

The Phils are going into this series in much the same order the Braves did last season, in that on paper they are hopelessly outclassed. The Braves won, in four straight games, an unheard-of feat. And the Phils will wait till October 17.

Business Manager Rhetelme declared that the club would be prepared to make an announcement today in regard to the purchase of tickets.

The tickets were ordered as soon as the pennant was clinched and they will arrive from the printer's today. However, it is doubtful if any will be distributed before Thursday morning.

More Entries Appear For Sheephead Races

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Postponement of the Astor Cup race to next Saturday at least discloses that the race had a silver lining. It will mean more cars to face the starter and insure a far bigger field to fight it out for the twelve cash prizes of the $50,000 purse.

The Peugeot racer, which is on its way across the ocean on a slow steamer for Ralph Mulford, is due today. The missing valves for the British Sunbeam will have arrived, and there will be time to replace the broken cylinder of the Italian Bugatti entered by Charles W. Fuller. A chance will be afforded Harry S. Harkness to get his Delage into racing shape, and the participation of both of Grever Berdell's Erwin Specials is possible.

Three-Game Lots for Fans in Philadelphia Who Would See Contests

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—Reserved seats and boxes for the world's series games in Philadelphia will be sold only in strips of three tickets, good for No. 1, 2 and 3 of the series.
